STUDIO CLASSES

Advanced Drawing

In this class, students will engage in advanced level practice and study of traditional and contemporary methods of drawing in a variety of media and genres. This includes drawing from observation and imagination, and creative exploration of drawing techniques with a range of materials, including: pencil, charcoal, brush/pen and ink, conte crayons, subtractive techniques (i.e., drawing with erasers), non-traditional materials, and collaborative/conceptual approaches to drawing. Teaching methods in this class include in-class exercises, guided practice with new techniques and materials, group activities, independent work based on students’ choices, class discussions and critiques, and short lectures/videos to learn about the many ways traditional and contemporary artists have used drawing in their work.

Clay

Appropriate for both beginners and experienced students, this ceramics course will encourage students to explore a variety of ceramic processes including: wheel-throwing, basic hand-building and surface treatment. Students will engage in fundamental glazing and firing techniques, and upon completion, will leave with their finished glazed artworks.

Painting & Mixed Media Collage

Students will dive into the studio and explore a wide range of materials and processes. From canvas to pizza boxes, mixed media collage is an open experimentation with the materials, surfaces and applications.

Self-Guided Open Studio

A number of open studio spaces will be available for camp students to continue their artistic explorations. Open studio sessions will be fully supervised by the UNCG art education staff.

Digital Graphic Design

Through the production of an actual shop, students will explore the foundations of digital graphic design. Just like a real business, student will use professional software in combination with print and social media to create meaning, share ideas, tell stories, and bring people together.

Filmmaking

Film Shooting & Editing Campers will be exploring and gaining skills in film shooting and editing. Topics include single camera operation, individual/group production, location sound recording and lighting, as well as non-linear editing technique and aesthetics.

Digital Photography

The theme of this course will be Documentary Photography and how to stay relevant in an ever-changing world. The course will include a brief history of photography and its documentary origins. Students will learn the basics of how a camera works and the techniques involved in a successful photograph, including elements of composition, exposure, and lighting. Students will receive hands-on experience with a short field trip/photography scavenger hunt. A concise tutorial of editing will also be included.

IARc class sessions will address questions: What does Futbol have to do with it? When is it sustainable? Which community are we in? Where is our home? Why cut there? Are there more? Can we do that? IARc class sessions will start with something bigger and make little pieces and reassemble those pieces into big things to show off. Start with big, Why, questions and ask smaller, What, questions and answer them in function, color, material and form.
